

Whether new to computers or if a student uses them for everyday tasks, an assessment of their computer skills can help to determine their skill level and which courses would be appropriate.

Our outstanding teachers will provide the necessary instruction to learn all about computers; computer hardware, productivity software, typing skills, as well as using smartphones with computers. All of our teachers are highly qualified, native English speakers with university degrees, and have many years of experience.

Every person who is looking to take a computer class has a different reason to go. They may be a senior wanting to know how they can communicate with their children more. They may be a stay-at-home parent wanting to re-enter the workforce and need to brush up on a few things. They might be a seasoned professional who wants to be more efficient with their time and learn better keyboard skills. Whatever your reason might be, there is something for you at A&D Tutoring.

We do not place students with different levels in the same group. If there are only one or two students enrolled in the current course, the number of lessons is reduced, and the student will receive private (semi-private) classes at a discounted rate.
